Where our story starts...

"Don't let people tell you who you are. You tell them" - Serena van der Woodsen"

The truth is, I tell things as they are and today, I speak for the community of Hispanic Heritage Month, the month of open hearts and touching celebration. September 15th to October 15th- yet another month to celebrate our differences- the passion to our hearts and the very string to solucky's. This month means a deep delving into the rich traditions, stories, & experiences of the Hispanic & Latino communities that enrich the cultural mosaic of the Bay Area & beyond.

Throughout this month, we flip through the never-ending pages & stories of monumental contributions to the world of Hispanic & Latino culture and we see a world of various fields: from the arts, to the sciences, to politics, to community activism. Together, we celebrate revolutionary visionaries like Dolores Huerta, who fought for our labor & civil rights, & vibrant artists such as Frida Kahlo, whose spirit & creativity inspires us today.

The brand proudly honors the rich traditions within our history by dedicating this feature to our cover model, Miranda Lopez, as well as Santiago Padilla, who both represent an essential part of the Hispanic community. We are enthralled with the stories that enrich our community, and thrice as committed to sharing the strength in their specialty. Honoring each other's history transcends the confines of a single month; it is an enduring reminder of the vitality each of us plays in the diverse mosaic that is 'us.' This endless process of bridge-building, knowledge enrichment, and continuous learning from one another is the battleground of celebrating our collective identities and not just a homage to our heritage; it is a celebration of a shared journey.

"You are no one till you're talked about" - Blair Waldorf

With the chillier seasons rolling in, especially when the jingle bells chime- a particular T.V. show comes to mind. The very popular early 2000's drama series left its legacy on the millions of viewers per season, forever held close for its plotted dramas around the holiday season. More intricately known for its detailed portrayal of glamor, the elite live extravagantly within Manhattan's Upper East Side. With a blended montage of romance, scandal, drama, & mystery, in case you couldn't tell, the show is nothing short of iconic as the name itself rings several bells. Given these multipliable attributes, & it being one of my favorite shows, it was only a ticking timer before it set the aesthetic for our winter magazine issue. & just in time for the month of October, the show's drama & mystery plagues like Halloween.

As fashionistas do, planning this issue meant multitudes of detailed preparation & a heavy focus on how to follow foot the T.V. show itself. What felt essential to our team was ensuring we casted our models a bit differently. Alongside our focus on Hispanic representation, we seeked to create a set

In our most typical fashion, I can proudly say we have reached a multitude of milestones including collaborations, events, & the checking off of yet another solucky dream. That calls for a recap!

First off, we, solucky, had the glamor & privilege to finally host our very first event. Celebratory of our third year anniversary of existence, cheers to an abundance of in-person sales & an event of mere appreciation for solucky's climbing stunts. A chic by-product of our collaboration with casino bleu included spheres of music, clothing, & cuisine. Collaborating with a well-versed, high class brand like casino bleu meant a killer boiler room event set for its success in Berkeley, California where many people showed up & dressed out!

We soon jumped right into our next event collaboration: solucky x staxco.— a last minute, yet successful fete filled with Halloween costume extravaganza, & rage. Our "heaven or hell" Halloween rager, thrown in the heart of downtown San Jose, threw us in the midst of connection & music with our solucky audience. Of course, we carried these new connections onto the staxco's podcast, where Lukas Maciel granted me the honor of discussing solucky as a brand, its roots, & what its future looks like.

And thank goodness for killer artistry because let's welcome this issue's solucky x lotustardust x reya collaboration filled with unique jewelry & artistic design handcrafted by young & talented sisters who fit snugly in this winter's aesthetic. As you browse

As penetrative as always, furthering the brand & optimizing all the time & resources remains a priority. Sharing the secret that solucky has come this far will forever be as surreal as my dreams sometimes feel. The community that has been built, the hearts that have been reached, & the hands that have come together in the making of this magazine gives my dreams the wings to flutter. solucky Exclusive: diving into the works of Richa Tupe

ALL photos submitted by R

Interviewed & written by Joseangel Peña-Gutierrez + Creative Style/Tone by Inika Mehra

“Don’t let people tell you who you are. You tell them”
- Serena van der Woodsen

Let's welcome to the stage 22-year-old Richa Tupe (she/her/hers), a Wellesley College graduate navigating her life as both a digital creator & fashion influencer in the one & only New York City- or in other words, let's introduce a woman who has her cake & eats it too. Her Instagram & TikTok accounts, @richbratzbaby, have amassed over 80 thousand followers combined- an impressive count for someone of any stature. Since beginning her journey, Richa has accumulated whatever surrounds her to creatively put together unique & attention-grabbing outfits.

34

Richa, of definitive stature, defines herself as a “fashion stylist”. Whatever could she mean? Stemming from the pandemic, Richa was left with barrels of unused creative energy & infused it into finding her sense of style. A solid form of artistry for a dedicated craftswoman... yet one peculiar, obvious question has been nagging our minds. What holds her pen to the paper?

Richa likes to draw inspiration from unique places such as nature, different fabrics, emotions, or feelings she would get when touching different objects. & of course, looking online at Pinterest, or even drawing inspiration from old Vogue photoshoots & people walking around always gets the pot boiling. Richa shares a little secret: “I have been obsessed with ribbons lately... a lot of my outfits have been inspired by that silky feel of a ribbon.” It seems Richa’s originality shines as she finds her own balance between creativity & inspiration.

The worst of the worst: Creative block. Burnout. Fatigue. Three emotions nobody likes. Yet somehow, even the best of the best feel- but how to navigate? Richa speaks for us all when she acknowledges the challenge. For content creators like herself, finding ways to overcome creative blocks or burnout can be particularly taxing. Richa has been making fashion content for a few years now & is still finding new ways to keep her creative fire alive. “You always want to be unique... you want to have a different style all the time... It’s hard to constantly come up with brand new ideas especially when you know that people like a certain style.” Richa handles these pressures like a champ, one would call it, taking periodic breaks from time to time to reset herself & allow for new creativity to brew. Richa continues to take those leaps to show off something different even when she knows a certain formula would work. What she knows is only akin to what she doesn’t, Upper East Siders, & that is what makes her shine. You could call this an attribute to the success she has been having.

As for clothes, Richa prefers to venture out the major boroughs of New York, sourcing her materials from thrifts to stir her fashion renovations. She yearns for the very clothes & accessories that people wouldn’t dare bat a normal eye towards so she can have her chance at creating something unique, special & fun to the everyday eyes. She enjoys emanating from older American icons like Audrey Hepburn & Marilyn Monroe. Living in New York has been a longtime dream of Richa. “There was always this magical element... There are so many opportunities, you can be whoever you want.” Essentially, it’s full of magic & she lives for the community aspect of it all. Having her cakes, & eating them too, & of course, having people acknowledge her outfits on the streets is nothing short of motivating for Richa to continue her life as a content creator.

A little birdie told us about one of SF's best-kept secrets: The Pawn Shop

Written by Mikaila Bramlette + Creative Style/Tone by Inika Mehra

"I'm not a stop along the way. I'm a destination."
- Blair Waldorf"

A mysterious galore of intrigue and gastronomic delight... oh, or did you mean The Pawn Shop on 993 Mission Street, San Francisco, CA 94103? San Francisco's enigmatic little gem is the hidden culinary treasure nestled within the storied 6th Street corridor. Unlocking the doors to an unparalleled dining experience, the fusion of its speakeasy vibe & tantalizing tapas creates an atmosphere you have yet to experience. Now I've really got you at the door, haven't I? To gain access, simply present something intriguing to the pawn master - whether it be a physical item to add to their collection, a joke, riddle, or even a quirky dance move. The possibilities are truly as endless as your imagination takes you. Dream on, they told me.

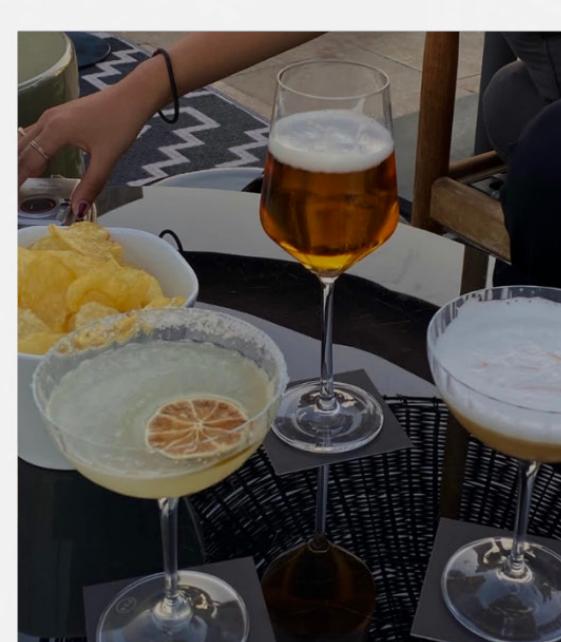

Need New Year's Plans?

check this spot out!

Instagram
@thepawnshopsf

Our very own Pawns holds an array of delectable pleasures to taste including "BITES" like Jamon Serrano or the tantalizing Patatas Braves. Let's not talk about the Cheese Plate's medley of Aged Manchego & Mahon... I'll start getting hungry. Better get your scuba dive on because you'll be diving into the savory depths of the "TAPAS" selection with the Gambas al Ajillo. Featuring shrimp, garlic, & sherry vinegar, you're in for the ultimate galore.

We've got more— handcrafted cocktails, at your mercy, concocting magic and finesse to enhance the dining experience you've been searching for. My secret concoction: Try the refreshing Uno, blending Elderflower Liqueur, with Cava & Grapefruit, or savor the sophistication of Tres, combining Cockburn's Porto Branco, Dry Vermouth, & Tonic. Either one will set you on fire.

Taken by N

Of course, I wouldn't tell you this was the ultimate place if you couldn't host your special events too. With customizable menus tailored to your needs, an extensive wine selection, and the option for live entertainment, your corporate gatherings or private celebrations will be fiending for this home. From seated dinners to interactive food stations, their space is primed to accommodate your every wish. Discover the allure of The Pawn Shop - where every visit unveils new surprises, flavors, & memories. Solucky says, check it out and be a part of an experience that transcends the ordinary. It might just leave that indelible mark you've been searching for.

Dishin' the Haute Truth on Spring Summer 2024 Collections

Written by Alina Jarif

ALL Photos submitted by A

"If you're going to be sad, you might as well be sad in Paris"
- Blair Waldorf

Greetings, Upper East Siders. Your one & only source into the scandalous world of fashion is back, & oh boy, do I have the juiciest tea to spill after the grand unveiling of the Spring Summer 2024 collections. From the concrete jungle of New York to the romantic streets of Paris, fashion weeks across the globe have unleashed a whirlwind of styles that either had us swiping our platinum cards or left us cringing. Gossip Girl's passport got a hefty stamp this time, & I've curated the juiciest hits & misses of this latest fashion season.

OH YES

TOM FORD SHOWS US WHAT A POWERFUL, RICH WOMAN LOOKS LIKE

THE STANDARD

Could it be that the Upper East Side's favorite muse, Serena Van Der Woodson, has cast her stylish spell on Tom Ford's latest collection. The debut of Tom Ford's newly appointed creative director Peter Hawking gave us breathtaking ready-to-wear looks that are sure to turn heads. From the chic styling of accessories to the sparkly gold theme, the brand beautifully captured what New York glamor looks like during Milan fashion week.

OH YES

BALMAIN PERSEVERES AFTER ROBBERY & LEAVES US SPEECHLESS

GRAZIA MAGAZINE

The fashion headlines were buzzing with scandal when news broke that over fifty precious pieces from Balmain were stolen with their SS24 show just around the corner. Yet, the show was an absolute success. Despite the chaos, Balmain managed to pull off a jaw-dropping spectacle, showcasing a lineup filled with breathtaking silhouettes & enthralling motifs—crafted a variety of materials such as recycled plastic bottles, of all things! Talk about turning eco-chic into an art form. Bravo, Balmain, for turning adversity into absolute success.

OH YES SCHIAPARELLI UNDERSTANDS IT'S ALL IN THE DETAILS

Spotted! Schiaparelli, the ultimate visionary. In this tech-obsessed era, where everyone's thirsting for innovation like it's the latest gossip, some of the recent fashion lines have left us in an absolute state of confusion. But fear not, fashion disciples, for Schiaparelli has shown us that pushing the boundaries & thinking outside the fashion box can still result in pure opulence & sophistication. From the sheer genius of sewing cigarettes into couture creations to that jaw-dropping closing ensemble made of red acrylic nails, Schiaparelli's latest collection definitely makes it a brand of the future.

ABSOLUTELY NOT CHRISTIAN COWAN'S FUR BALL... absolute flop

Don't get me wrong, Christian Cowan showcased beautiful designs but the fur ball was not necessary. It's just one example of my latest "ick" when it comes to fashion just trying too hard to go viral. Must we sacrifice genuine glamor for a stunt? There's absolutely nothing fabulous about a look that could be crafted from the dust bunnies & hairballs under my bed. The poor model got lost & crashed on the runway wearing that thing.

ABSOLUTELY NOT RICK OWENS DOING TOO MUCH WHILE DOING NOTHING AT ALL

VOGUE RUNWAY

Rick Owens may have tried to push the boundaries with that whole dystopian vibe, but I have to admit, I was simply yawning. I feel like I have been stuck in a never-ending cycle of the Ikea comforter dress & the beekeeper mask with different designers these past few seasons, & I'm over it. In a world where everyone is striving to be edgy & cool, it's time for something truly fresh & innovative to take center stage, don't you think?

ABSOLUTELY NOT CHANEL CONTINUES TO GIVE AN OUTDATED LOOK BUT MAKES IT LOOK MORE CHEAP & BORING

BRITISH VOGUE

Oh, Chanel, Chanel, Chanel! They've been clinging to their classic plaid look like their life depends on it. However, this time they managed to carry it with cheaper looking fabrics & dollar tree flip flops. Chanel is an iconic, timeless brand, but isn't it high time they dust off their creative cobwebs & serve us something truly innovative & exciting? After all, even the classics need a little makeover now & then, don't you think?

My Worst Kept Secret Yet: Diwali Edition

Written by Inika Mehra

"I know more than anyone what it's like to want to reinvent yourself" - Serena van der Woodsen

I must have drawn ten lines over my fingers the same way our ancestors drew mountains over our dreams & capes over the pain of being millennials so we didn't have to feel a thing in an often cornering America- the accent, the "smell", the inability to be anything else but smart- because growing up in America didn't mean the fluorescent light of our culture in the billboard campaigns. I must have been dreaming when I got caught in the disease of incorrectness & I've allowed myself the courage, & the shame, of being wrong because for so long many of us were. Wearing hot gloves over our mehendi & covering our food with matted lids; the sorry attempt to mask the trace of being South Asian.

Rumor has it we have come long past colonialism, long past the depths of Westernization to come out as our own-passionately, proudly, & thunderously. We are anything but soft, yet anything but hardened by the face of our struggle to fit in when we were born to stand out. As Kim Kaur Mann represents the Sikh community, & the strength in the nonviolence of her people, she represents for all of us what it means to commemorate a day filled with empathy selflessness, freedom, & light in the face of threatening violence. A little sweetness always seals the painting with fruitfully designed U.K. Krispy Kreme pastries in honor of our passionately served Diwali.

Where did she design it from? What is she wearing? Ideal questions upon sighting of Kim Kaur Mann's culturally adept, classy, yet innovative representation. Of course, she provides a natty, evocative, & shining South Asian galore with signature bangles, chudiya, & ethnic design one can simply not ignore. She is eye-catching, authentic, & bold with the confidence & pride solucky wants their South Asian community to embody.

Today marks a day of freedom- today I am proud, the South Asian community is proud, because I was sure I was dreaming before the media caught the breeze in my eyes & it was our very own brand of South Asian representation in our very own H&M U.K. store & Krispy Kreme U.K. donuts. As a donut lover, & fashion lover, never in my 21 years of existence, never in my father's 35 years in America, & never in my ancestral lineage of colonialism has there been more of a voice than before.

Courtesy of Krispy Kreme (UK)

This day marks not only the courageous celebration of light, Diwali, but the victory of light, the good over evil, the immense joy we've discovered in being South Asian- because the embarrassment has finally turned to disgust at the thoughtful remembrance of being in remorse, being regretted, being miserable that we failed to recognize the privilege in being a person of color.
